PLEASE REMEMBER: Lick the envelope-- not the back of your hand.

DEAR NICK:

My sister and I catch Double Dare every afternoon after school. We like all the sloppy stuff, especially the Sundae Slide. But we have a question for you. Aren't you wasting a lot of good food? Isn't it wrong to waste all that food when there are so many hungry people who could use it?

Chari Thomasson
Evanston, IL

Good question, Chari. The other day, Diane and I were sitting around in a giant, swimming-pool-sized bowl of rice pudding thinking about that same thing.

Later, we went over to Double Dare and asked about it. We were told that all of the food used on the show is "stale-dated." That means it's all too stale and old to be sold in stores or eaten by people. It would have been thrown away anyway.

Jovial Bob

DEAR NICK:

My friends and I were watching MTV, and this Weird Al video came on, the one where he does the fat Michael Jackson. It was excellent! We laughed so hard, we scared the dog, and he started crying and running in circles around the room!

Could you write something about Weird Al? Where does he live? Is he really weird in person? One of my friends says that he doesn't have any furniture in his house-- only records. Is that true?

Josh Miller
Raleigh, NC

We've heard about you, Josh. You're the guy with the laugh that can terrify dogs, right?

Well, you know our motto around here: You want it? You got it! Diane is flying out to Weird Al's place to talk to him-- and don't worry-- we're going to take pictures so you can see what his house looks like.

We'll get the interview in the magazine real soon. Hey--don't thank us. We're just doing our job.

Jovial Bob

DEAR NICK:

Can I join the Nickelodeon Kids Club?

Danny Wendt
Denton, MD

Sorry, Danny. There's no way you're getting in. Diane, Peter and I took a vote, and it came out 3-0 against you.

Everyone else in the United States can join, though. And when you do, you'll get a Nick Club Card which will get you all kinds of nifty discounts and special deals-- and lots of other neat stuff-- plus 12 issues of U.S. News & World Report. Oh no... sorry about that. You get

HARD AT WORK:
Jovial Bob, Diane, and Peter.

12 issues of Nickelodeon Magazine. I keep getting those confused!

Quick-- find the envelope in the middle of this magazine. Read it carefully-- fill it out, then mail it in. Go ahead. We'll wait here while you do it.

And Danny-- good news! Diane and Peter changed their votes. You're in, man! Way to go!

Jovial Bob

DEAR NICK:

I heard that you were starting a new magazine. Will there be a Letters page in your magazine? If there is, would you print my letter?

Jason Schmidt
Dayton, OH

Your letter was so fascinating, Jason, we just had to print it! Can anyone else out there write a letter as interesting as Jason's? Let's hear from you. Tell us what's hot and what's not in your neighborhood. Tell us what you think of our new magazine.

Diane, Peter, and I have got to get going now. This giant bowl of rice pudding is starting to go sour.

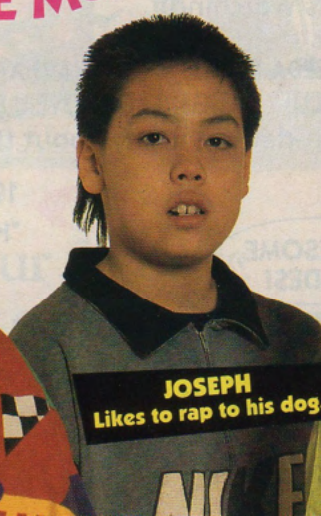

Yuck!

RATED
FOR KIDS-BY KIDS™

When it comes to the latest games, what are the Hits— and what are the Pits? Every month, our two Gonzo Game Gurus— Lisa and Erick— give the latest games a test-run.

THIS MONTH: A BOY & HIS BLOB for Nintendo

THE GAME: This game is all about a boy, his pal Blobert (nicknamed Blob), and jellybeans. Blob has come to earth from Blobolonia, where an evil emperor is forcing everyone to eat nothing but marshmallows and chocolate. Your mission is to blast off for Blobolonia and use your knapsack full of powerful jellybeans to defeat the evil emperor.

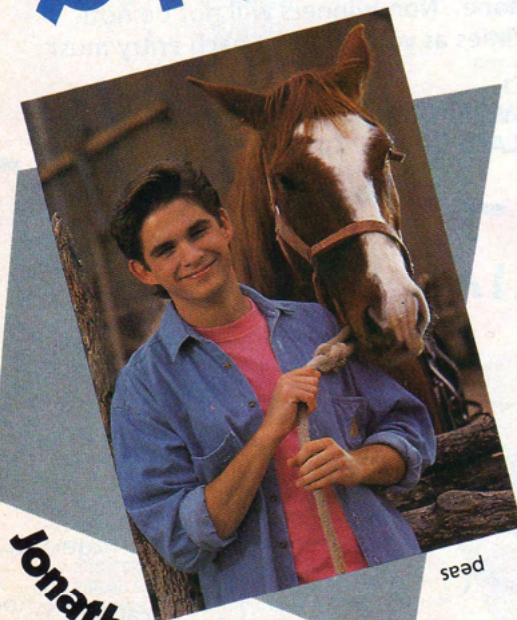

THE RATINGS:

LISA: The best thing about this game was that the Blob was kind of cute. It's a very challenging game. You definitely want to keep playing to see how far you can go. But the game is also confusing— especially when you first play. And if you make a mistake, you die! The secret of the game is to make no mistakes. I'd rate it C— for Challenging.

ERICK: It's hard, very hard. And I didn't think the instruction booklet told enough about the game. But it was a lot of fun once I learned what the different jellybeans did and how to use them. I'd recommend this if you like adventure games— but it's a little slow-paced for people who like action games. I'd rate it F— for Fun Once You Get Going.

big change!

A new dude is about to join the HEY, DUDE Bar None gang. He's Jonathan Galkin. Jonathan plays Jake, a California dude whose parents have sent him to the Bar None so that Uncle Ben can teach him the value of honest work. Jake would rather drum up a little excitement-- mainly because he plays drums! He also marches to the beat of a different drummer, as the rest of the Bar None gang soon discovers! Watch for the new dude when the new episodes of HEY, DUDE begin this fall on Nickelodeon.

Jonathan Galkin

gonna be big!

Hey—you've gotta watch out for anyone who gets to sing a duet with New Kid Jordan Knight. We're talking about ANA, who is 15 and goes to high school in Florida when she isn't making hit albums. When it came time to record Body Language, ANA had a little help from her friend Debbie Gibson, who produced three of the songs. Here's a little secret ANA told us: She wasn't able to get too close to Jordan when they recorded their duet, "Angel of Love." That's because she recorded her part in Boston—and he recorded his part in Atlanta!

BIG MOVIES

WHICH WILL BE THE BIG SUMMER MOVIE? YOU DECIDE!

DICK TRACY

The comic strip character comes to life—but will this film be as sharp as Tracy's chin? And will Madonna leave us all breathless in her role as Breathless Mahoney?

JETSONS: THE MOVIE

George Jetson and his spaced-out space age family come to the BIG screen. And who is the voice of space ace teenager Judy Jetson? You're right-- it's Tiffany.

BACK TO THE FUTURE: PART III

Michael travels through time again, this time to the wild, wild west. Will it be wilder than PART II? Or will we all decide to travel to a different movie this summer?

GREMLINS II

Those fun-loving little green guys are back-- and Phoebe Cates has got 'em! Hope she's locked up her blender for this one!

What's ahead this summer in the BIGgest book series in America—The Babysitters' Club? BIG trouble! We talked to Ann M. Martin, who writes the books, and she gave us a sneak peek at what happens in this summer's Super Special.

Wouldn't you know it involves Claudia and Dawn! They take four kids on a sailing race, and then to a picnic on a tiny island. Sounds like fun? Well, it is—until a storm comes up, destroys their boats, and they're totally stranded!

Sshh. Don't beg us for more details. We promised Ann that's all we'd give away!

big laughs

An old lady who lived on the third floor of a boardinghouse broke her leg. The doctor put a cast on it and warned her not to climb any stairs.

Several months later, the cast was removed. "Can I climb stairs now?" the old woman asked.

"Yes," said the doctor.

"Thank goodness!" she said.

"I'm sick and tired of shinnying up and down that drainpipe!"

JIM: Hey, I think your mirror is broken.

JOE: Why? What's wrong with it?

JIM: Every time I try to look at something, my face gets in the way!

SUE: Why are you standing in front of that mirror with your eyes closed?

SARA: I want to see what I look like when I'm asleep!

JIM: That last joke was two-thirds of a pun.

SUE: What do you mean?

JIM: P.U.

"Waiter, what's this in my soup?"

"I don't know, sir. I can't tell one bug from another!"

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

NICKELODEON

You can't do a magazine without including a spread on the New Kids— right? We were sitting around the Nick office, wondering what to write about them when the phone rang. Diane picked it up, and to her surprise, New Kid Danny Wood was on the other end. He was on his way to a hotel in L.A. and had a few minutes to kill. What better way than a long-distance car phone conversation? Here's how it went....

DIANE: Hey, Danny, how's it going?

DANNY: Fine. How are things back in New York?

DIANE: Just fine here. I've got some questions to ask you from some kids.

DANNY: Okay. Fire away.

DIANE: Well, first they want to know if your families travel with you.

DANNY: No. Not on a regular basis. Sometimes we fly our mothers and brothers and sisters out. Especially when we're in nice places like Florida or California. Then we fly them out to have some fun.

DIANE: How do you guys keep in touch with your families when you're on the road?

DIANE: We call them as much as we can, every day or so. Just so they won't worry so much. But they still worry.

DIANE: What do they worry about?

DANNY: About our health, and whether we're okay, and whether we're going crazy. And if we're eating right. That kind of stuff.

DIANE: Do you ever get food care packages from home while you're on the road?

DANNY: No. But when we get home, we can't wait to get some home-cooked food.

DIANE: What's the first thing you eat when you get home?

DANNY: Mashed potatoes. I miss real mashed potatoes.

DIANE: How do you guys travel when you're on tour?

DANNY: By bus. It's a lot more relaxing than flying.

DIANE: What do you do on the bus?

DANNY: Sleep mostly. And we talk, and watch movies, and play Nintendo games.

DIANE: What's your favorite Nintendo game?

DANNY: Right now I like Bird vs. Jordan.

DIANE: What kind of music are you listening to these days?

DANNY: All kinds— R & B, rock, rap, oldies. I really like Jody Watley's You Wanna Dance With Me. It remixes all of her hits. I also made a tape to listen to with a lot of slow songs on it. It's very relaxing.

DIANE: Here's a question some boys wanted me to ask you. Don't you ever get tired of girls always screaming during your song? Don't you wish they'd just shut up?

DANNY: (laughs) No! Never! I hope they never stop. We love the attention!

THINGS WE NEVER WANT TO READ ABOUT NKOTB ! !

Sure, we like 'em as much as anyone. We think they're terrific. But why do all the magazines have to write the same dumb things about them over and over? Really. We'll go totally mental if we have to read any of these New Kid items one more time!!

1. One or more of the New Kids is dating Alyssa Milano. Come on, guys— we know it isn't true. They don't have time to date anybody these days!

2. Anything about Donnie's brother Mark. Hey, we're sure he's a great guy—but so what?

3. Jon and Tiffany are engaged. Please, spare us! Please don't write any more about Tiffany and NKOTB.

4. How friendly the New Kids are with Debbie Gibson. We get the point already!

5. How NKOTB got together. We know they all were school buddies except for Joe. We've read it three million times!

6. Please don't write any more about Danny's passion for body-building.

7. We're really not that interested in what they eat on tour. Hamburgers and pizza? Man, that's fascinating!

8. We also think you can stop writing about how Joe loves any food that's Italian.

9. You can drop the story about how Danny has a fish named Frog. That fish went belly-up a long time ago!

10. Please, please don't write that boys are totally jealous and hate the band. We've read that over and over. So what are all those boys doing at New Kids concerts? Hating it?? We don't think so!

WHEN I W

I know what you're wondering. It's the first question people ask me when they want to know what I was like as a kid. You want to know if I was funny, right? You want to know if I was always falling down, making funny faces—the class clown.

Well, the truth is I wasn't a cutup at all. I always spoke well. I was very articulate. But it wasn't important to me to be funny when I was a kid. I certainly never thought of becoming a comedian. For most of my childhood, believe it or not, I wanted to be a surgeon.

I was a troubled kid in many ways. My parents were divorced when I was four or five. It was hard on my brother Ned and me. Ned is my older brother. He and I were very close. We lived with our mother. But my dad made a major effort to move his family near wherever we were so that he was always close to us.

We grew up in the country, in Woodstock, New York. We weren't particularly wild, but I remember getting in trouble sometimes.

I can remember robbing a candy store with some friends when I was about seven. While one friend got the attention of the old storekeeper, I opened my briefcase and, with my forearm, cleared off the candy bar counter. Then we all ran around back to the alley and ate all the candy bars.

We were sick as dogs. It was really disgusting. I guess we proved to ourselves that crime doesn't pay.

CHEVY'S MOVIES

How many of them have you seen?

When I was ten, we moved to New York City. But we'd go back to Woodstock every summer. I was lucky. I had the peace and beauty of the country for part of the year, and the excitement of New York City the rest of the year.

I guess I was a pretty sophisticated kid, although I really didn't know it. Know what my favorite foods were when I was a kid? No—not pizza and hamburgers. My favorites were squab and artichokes. Don't ask me why. I just loved squab and artichokes!

We lived in an apartment in a four-floor brownstone in New York. Ned and I shared a room. As I said, we were very close. We used to do most everything together.

We spent a lot of time out on the streets. I climbed everywhere. I knew every alleyway from 100th Street to downtown. We used to play a street game called handball. It was a kind of baseball game where you stood on a brownstone stoop and hit a twenty-five-cent Spalden with your hand.

We used to rollerskate everywhere. We would rollerskate all the way down Park Avenue, from 100th Street to 42nd Street and back. Sure, it was dangerous. But Ned and I didn't care.

Ned was really the funny one. He's a year older than me. He was always the prototype of what I wanted to become. I really looked up to him.

Today he's a settled, well-adjusted lawyer in New York. But when we were kids, he was a real prankster. Once on April Fool's Day, he and I pulled one of the meanest pranks you can imagine on our mom.

We called her up on a pay phone and Ned disguised his voice and pretended to be a police officer. He asked her if she had a green Volkswagen. She said yes. Then Ned said, "Well, there's a car like that up on a bridge, and the bridge is raised, and there are two boys in the car."

I was in the background making police station sounds. So it all sounded real to her. Poor mom believed it! It was such a mean joke. Of course we ran right home to let her know it was a joke.

My dad was the funniest of all in my family. He didn't pull pranks or play practical jokes. But he made the funniest faces. A lot of the goofy faces I use on TV and in films came from my dad.

He used to take us on vacation trips in the car. Our trips weren't anything like the Griswolds' trips in the Lampoon Vacation movies—but they were pretty funny just the same. Mainly because my dad was so funny in the car, making jokes about everything we saw. We also used to have hilarious "rude noises" contests that completely cracked my brother and me up.

With my brother and my father around, I really wasn't the funny one in the family. Being a comedian was never really a goal of mine. I wanted to be a surgeon for as long as I could remember.

What changed my mind? The first Chemistry class I ever took! I was so bad at it, I knew immediately that I'd never be a surgeon. I had to find another way of cutting up!

THRASHIN' IS YOUR PASSION, LIKE THE GUYS GETTING AIR IN THESE PHOTOS, YOU'VE GOT TO SPEAK THE LANGUAGE. WE MEAN,

IF YOU CAN'T TALK THE TALK—YOU MIGHT AS WELL WALK! HERE'S A QUICK NICK GUIDE....

THIS IS BURLSCHOOL!

MR. WILSON: Named after the grouchy neighbor on Dennis the Menace. In one episode, Mr. Wilson steps on Dennis's skateboard. The term is used when a skater makes a dumb move. When you make a MR. WILSON, the usual result is a BODY SLAM which gives you a BEEF JERKY!

OLLIE: A no-hands aerial move. Skater jumps into the air, keeping board attached to feet.

BURLSCHOOL: The ultimate in gnarliness. Overwhelmingly awesome.

CURB GRINDS: A street maneuver. Skater hurls self and board at curb so that right wheels and left wheels are separated by the curb.

HAND PLANT: Skater perches on edge of ramp and holds body up for a split-second with just one hand.

Bargain Night

A Short Story by Ellen Emerson White

They hid in Curtains and Draperies. Actually, they hid behind draperies. Sam chose Burgundy Red, Tracy took Harvest Gold, and Bill went with the Yellow-Flecked Morning Glory Green. They hid, very quietly, waiting for their friends Jessica and Nathan to find them. They had discovered, after a lot of experimenting, that an intensely competitive game of Department Store Hide-and-Seek was a fine way to relax after a long, stressful day of junior high school. Especially in the springtime.

So, silent behind their draperies, they waited. And waited. And waited.

"Seems dark," Bill said after a long time.

"Shhh, they'll hear us," Tracy said, her voice muffled by the extra-heavy lining of the Harvest Gold.

Sam moved his drapery aside just enough to peek out into the store. "It is dark," he said.

They all peeked out. They all stared. The store was very dark. The store was closed.

"Whoa," Bill said. "They like, up

Sam nodded. "They must have figured we were smart enough to go home."

"That we could tell time." Tracy squinted at her watch, then showed it to Sam. "It's almost seven."

"The store closes at six," Sam said.

"Whoa, my parents are going to kill me," Bill said. "Plus, we're having pork chops tonight, and I really like pork chops."

"And applesauce?" Tracy asked. Bill nodded. "And sauerkraut." He looked unhappy. "I like sauerkraut."

"So, let's just check the doors," Sam said. "It should be easy enough to get out of here."

All of the doors were locked. They were also covered by metal gates. After trying every exit, they stood on one side of a large metal gate, looking out at the silent mall beyond. Even the fountains were turned off, and it was very quiet.

Tracy sighed, looking out. "Emerald City is closer and prettier than ever."

"Yo, that's the mall, Tracy," Bill said. "That's all it is."

Sam folded his arms, looking out at the Thom McAnn, at the Fish and Fry, at the Book Bargainland. "We should've hidden in Housewares," he said. "They would've found us in Housewares."

The department store was closed, and the three kids were trapped. Just what kind of a night would it be?

The other two nodded. "We're trapped here," Bill said grimly. "Maybe for the rest of our lives."

"At least for the rest of the night," Tracy said.

They all looked around at the quiet store.

"Trapped here," Sam said. "No adults. No rules." They all grinned.

"What do we do first?" Tracy asked.

"Nintendo!" Bill shouted, and ran for the Video and Audio Department.

They played every Nintendo game they could find. They bounced basketballs. They threw footballs. They rode bicycles. They flipped on all thirty televisions, set the channels for MTV, and turned the volume up all the way.

"This is excellent," Bill said, lying on the carpet in front of the televisions. "I like this a lot."

Sam looked up from his hand-held computer pinball game. "I'm getting kind of hungry."

"The tearoom," Tracy said. "Let's take over the tearoom!"

"Excellent," Bill said, and turned off ten of the televisions.

Ellen Emerson White, a recent ALA Honor Award winner, is one of today's most popular YA authors. Her newest novel, Long Live the Queen, will be published in paperback this summer

Sam turned off ten more. "I think we should dress for dinner," he said solemnly.

"Totally excellent!" Bill said, and they all ran to get outfits.

Tracy was the first one dressed, and the first one in the tearoom.

The tearoom was famous for its pie. Tracy was famous for liking pie. She pushed up the sleeves of her pink gathered prom gown, made sure her bridal veil was out of the way, and then helped herself to some chocolate cream pie. A la mode, of course.

"Nice outfit," Sam said, from the doorway.

Tracy grinned. "You, too."

Sam was wearing large fisherman's hip-waders, a bulky red woodman's jacket, with a red silk paisley scarf and a yellow lampshade for a hat. "Thank you," he said, and came in for some pie.

They had moved on to the apple, and were thinking about the blueberry, by the time Bill came in. He was wearing a quilted velour Run-

DMC shirt, leather pants, and shiny wing-tips. Also, a beret.

"Oh, no," Sam said, and he and Tracy both laughed.

"I think I look really cool," Bill said. "I could get an eighth grader to go out with me, wearing this. Maybe even a ninth grader."

"A real dumb ninth grader," Sam said.

"Yo, you're wearing that outfit, and you're making fun of me?"

Bill came over, tripping in his wing-tips, to see what they were eating. "I don't like pie. There any cake?"

There was lots of cake. After their very nutritious dinner, they took a walk around the store. They tried on hats in Women's Accessories; they tried on ties in Men's Wear. They rowed in rowing machines in Sporting Goods, "just to burn off those extra calories."

Sam was the one who found the microphone behind the front manager's desk. "Attention, shoppers," he said, his voice echoing through the store. "Blue-dot special, aisle four. Aisle four, people."

"It's aisle six," Tracy said, trying on sunglasses.

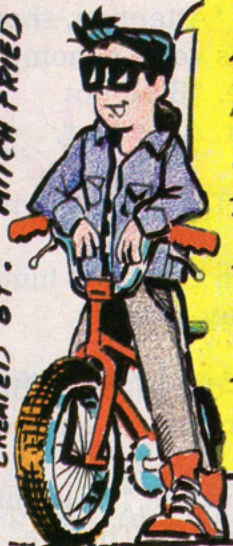

"Aisle six," Sam corrected himself. "Meant to say aisle six, people."

"And it's a red-dot special," Bill said, bouncing around on a pogo stick.

"Oops. Sorry, people," Sam said, over the microphone. "That's a red-dotter. Thank you for shopping here, and we hope to see you again."

SHORT STORY

After they got tired of playing with the microphone, they headed for the Furniture Department where they jumped on beds, rocked in rocking chairs, and danced around on top of dining room tables.

"Now what?" Tracy said, when they were tired of that.

"Nintendo!" Bill said, and they ran back to Video and Audio.

They were lying on the carpet, watching more videos, when they heard the sound of the main gate going up.

"Uh-oh, company," Sam said, and quickly turned off the televisions.

"Sam? Tracy? Bill?" a few familiar voices called.

They all looked at one another.

"Parents," Bill said.

Tracy moved into instant action. "Quick, put everything back! Then, let's meet in Auto Supplies!"

They scurried around the dark store, putting everything back in its place, and then, they were all standing in front of the carburetor cleaner when the store lights came on.

"Kids?" an anxious voice called. "Are you in here?"

"Mom?" Bill called back. "Is that you?"

"Sound tearful," Sam whispered.

"I-is that you, Mom?" Bill called, tearfully. "Are you really here?"

"We're here!" Bill Shouted, very, very tearful. "We're over here!"

"Where?" a male voice came towards them.

"Auto Supplies, Dad," Sam said, then lowered his voice.

"Tell them we were really, really scared. That we're really happy they found us."

"That we didn't eat all the pie," Tracy said.

"I ate cake," Bill said. "You guys ate pie."

Their parents came hurrying over, a worried store manager behind them, jingling keys.

"Oh, Thank God," Tracy's mother said.

"Are you all right?"

"We're fine," Tracy said, and smiled bravely. "But it was a little scary."

"It was very scary," Bill said.

"It was a nightmare," Sam agreed, and all three of them looked sad.

Tracy turned to the store manager. "We're sorry we got locked in, sir."

Sam nodded. "It was an accident."

"And, um, we got a little hungry," Bill admitted. "We had some, uh, tea."

"Well, of course you did," the store manager said, cheerful as can be. "Obviously, the store is to blame and," he reached into his pocket, taking out a few slips of paper, handing each of them one, "here are some gift certificates, just to be sure that there aren't any hard feelings."

"Thank you, sir," Tracy said.

"Thank you very much," Sam said.

"Yup," Bill said. "I mean, me too."

The store manager gave them a big smile. "I certainly hope you all shop here again."

Tracy, Sam and Bill exchanged grins

"Count on it," Tracy said.

"No question," Sam said.

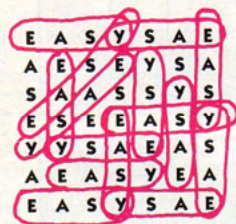

"Absolutely," Bill said.

NICK® SPACE BREAK

ACTIVE VOLCANOS exist on only two planets in our solar system—on IO, a moon of Jupiter, and on EARTH!

If the SUN goes out, we won't know about it for eight minutes! But don't start worrying about it. There's at least a few hundred million years left before it burns out.

Like to leap over tall buildings in a single bound? You could do it on the MOON. One-sixth gravity there means your legs can act as pogo sticks!

While we're on the MOON: You could bake a pizza there without an oven. Simply leave it in the sun for an hour at noon.

Endeavor, the new space shuttle that kids named last year, will be ready to fly by February, 1992.

BEST FLIED CHICKEN IN THE WORLD!

"Judy" flew 542 feet, nine inches to hold the current distance record for FLYING CHICKENS. You can flock to Columbus, Ohio, on May 19 to watch chickens wing it in an attempt to break the record.

SUPERMAN is in Metropolis, Illinois, on June 7. Will there be any super-vision??

THE WORLD'S LARGEST GARAGE SALE happens on June 9 in South Bend, Indiana. Need a garage?

LEAP SECOND: Adjust your watch back one second on June 30.

—Joe from Chicago

FILM THAT'S A CAMERA.

Or maybe we should call it the camera that's film.

Actually, the Kodak Fling 35 is a 35 mm camera that comes fully loaded with 24 exposures of Kodacolor Gold 400 film.

Take your shots, then return the camera, film and all, for processing.

You'll get back great color pictures.

Then just pick up another Fling 35 camera and start all over again.

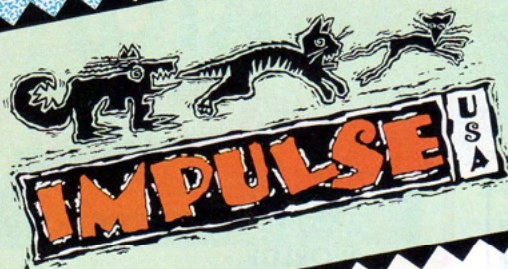

While you're at it, try the waterproof Weekend 35 camera, good for taking underwater pictures up to 8 feet deep. Or the panoramic Stretch 35 camera and get prints that are a remarkable 10" wide. They're both just as much fun.

The Kodak Fling 35 camera series. A whole new, exciting way to take pictures.
